VANCOUVER (CP) — Title searches of property around the proposed Grizzly Valley pipeline route found no land within 20 miles belonging to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, the Grizzly Valley pipeline inquiry was told Wednesday.

W. G. Parrett, the Prince George lawyer who carried out the searches, testified that only four small lots adjacent to the proposed development are privately held.

Parrett said he turned up only four small properties belonging to Phillips, all in Dawson Creek or Chetwynd, well away from the pipeline

Premier Bill Bennett ordered Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith to carry out the inquiry Jan. 11 after Phillips fired Arthur Weeks; his special assistant, for owning stock in an oil company that would benefit from the pipe-

Art Cameron, Phillips' constituency secretary in Dawson Creek, and two B.C. Petrole-um Corp. employees, resigned for the same reasons.

EVADED SHOTGUN BLASTS

Two Wilkinson Escapers Nabbed

By DEREK SIDENIUS Times Staff

Two inmates who fled Wilkinson Road jail Wednesday night in a hail of shotgun blasts were recaptured today only two miles from the jail.

George Storry, 22, awaiting trial in connection with an extortion-kidnapping incident in Saanich last month, and Albert Laberge, 19, awaiting trial on a drug charge, were captured at 8:15 a.m.

The pair had enjoyed only 12 chilly hours of freedom.

Labor and management in B.C. must proceed with contract negotiations assuming anti-inflation controls will continue until the end of 1978, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Wednesday.

Williams, back from a one-day federal-provincial labor ministers' conference in Otta-wa, said the "cloud" over labor relations in B.C. brought on by speculation controls would be lifted sooner — must not persist. He said the labor ministers' discussed extensively what would happen during the post-control period, but they dis-cussed it as if the controls lift controls sooner.

Both Premier Bill Bennett

Estimated net earnings for the branch for the year ending March 31, 1977, are $155 million, compared with an expected $170 million for the Well, he is in trouble and he did come down and the impact of his visit is undoubtedly far greater in Canada than it is

All that is reflected in the astounding predominance of a single issue in his public utterances, his speech to congress and his private talks with Carter.

That issue, the future of Quebec and as a corollary, of Canada, is strictly speaking, purely domestic, and no affair of the United States.

Yet, after several years of sharp difon other issues, it is Quebec that dominates the bilateral relation-

Protest Too Much?

Even Carter, cornered by a Canadian television interviewer, allowed himself to express a preference for Confederation.

One thing this remarkable turn of events has accomplished is to thrust into the background regular issues, such as economic policy, energy and pipelines, and even the great problem of world survival that hinges on initiatives to curb nuclear proliferation.

All these things were discussed by the two leaders. But the focus of the media and many observers in both countries was of the George Washington birthday holi-day was televised by Americans, but only for showing in Canada, where the networks contracted to carry it live.

There were Americans who wondered if Trudeau did not "protest too much" about separatism. Although they conceded he was using a U.S. forum to deliver a message homeward, they wondered if there wasn't an element of overkill, or

One could hardly have expected Carter to have expressed an opinion other than his desire to see a strong and united Canada, because to say otherwise would risk doing a de Gaulle. Yet his remarks might seem unwarranted interference to some Canadians. It is all that sensitive.

As it happens, Canada-U.S. relatioons are extremely jovial. Although there had been considerable resentment here about Canada's phasing out of energy exports and about discriminatory broadcasting and publishing policies, the diplomats had been making a concerted and pretty successful effort to smooth over the most abrasive ridges.

The hard U.S. winter of '77 and a fortuitous Canadian energy surplus combined to earn Canada brownie points for generously increasing gas and oil exports. A perfidious plan to pirate American television signals while blacking out American commercials was sidelined. The Americans in turn acceded to Canada's plea for a moratorium on construction of the Garrison water diversion and pollution project.

Carter made it plain that he wanted to make friends with Trudeau and to enhance the relationship. He explained this, also during the banquet toasts, by recalling Trudeau's earlier analogy of elephant and mouse felt living beside an American

Now, Carter observed, the elephants symbol for the Republican party are out and the donkeys' symbol for Democrats' are in the White House. Canada will find the donkeys much more companionable

It was not so long ago that Canada, under Trudeau's direction, began the new foreign policy initiative known loosely as the "third option" in which there was to be less dependence on the U.S. and more assertion of Canadian identity.

Trudeau got the message during his first term in office and an alarmingly close election result. As the Americans got the message there was considerable irritation misunderstanding and friction

Third Option

But good diplomacy and a residue of personal affection in the U.S. for Trudeau helped to defuse a lot of the concern here out the new Canadian nationalism

Trudeau is now capitalizing on that goodwill and that diplomacy.

He is using the U.S. as his platform for a slightly different sort of nationalism you might call it positive nationalism, or national unity — in a domestic campaign that may even save his political skin.

The question is whether this is merely a temporary convenience or part of a truly new era of sweetness and light in Canada-U.S. relations. Trudeau might soon feel compelled to reassert Canadian independence in harsher language and the risk he would take is whether the U.S. will let him get away with it. Donkeys can

It is adding insult to injury. We are to pay seven per cent sales tax on Hydro's "service charge." Mr. Bonner has stated that the $3 is to defray the costs of metre reading and bill processing, which, so far as I understand it, is purely labor. The Blacklist

A blacklist or list of names of civil servants, naming their party affiliations, has come from the premier's office. The premier, when asked if such a list existed said: "Absolutely not." Then when the document is produced he orders an investigation into how the document was

School Punishment

I read your recent article on ideas beng sought on how to deal with school bullies. Susan Brice, chairman of the Greater Victoria school board, said that she didn't think that the strap would have much effect on unruly students. In my opinion, this is a load of expletive deleted. Five and a half years ago, I lived in England, a country in which corporal punishment in schools still exists. The cane had so thoroughly gotten rid of the school bully that it was unusual for it ever to be used.

I would like to suggest the reintroduction of corporal punishment in British Columbia schools. Classrooms today have no control whatsoever, and the teacher can do nothing to a student who decides to make an ass of himself.

If the strap were brought back and used not only for major offences, such as the two incidents of brutality earlier this month, but for minor things, such as in-subordination as well, then schools would be much healthier for the students.

It is becoming so bad at George Bonner school in Mill Bay that one student actually smoked a cigarette in a grade eight classroom, and got away with it! But with the new rules about letting the students do what they want, what could the teacher do? He told the student to stop, but the boy paid no attention. The teacher couldn't touch him, or he'd be in trouble up to his ears. - H. Mark-Bodwell, Mill Bay

Joe Clark: The Man Who Would Be King Cultivates Ground

By DAVID HUMPHREYS

After nine years of Pierre Trudeau we have Rene Leves-

Joe Clark is speaking in a conversation on the eve of the first anniversary last weekend of his election to the Progressive Conservative party leadership. He is speaking about the future.

During his second year in the leadership Canadians will hear a lot more about Joe Clark's concept of the country. Quite deliberately, to the point of criticism, Clark has concentrated in his first year on the party organization, as indeed he said he would.

Fortunately most of his groundwork in the party was being completed just as the national crisis arrived with the election of the separatist Parti Quebecois government in Quebec. A lot of his time and energy have been spent at the organizing level in

Now he will offer federalist. French-Canadians a fresh approach. "I make no bones at all bout leading a party which offers outstanding French Canadians an unusual opportunity to have influence on national Clark believes the Quebec election will activate a lot of good federalists in the province who until now have not been sufficiently concerned to run for office.

A healthy number of those will look to us for at least two main reasons. One, a sense that because we have not been associated with the failures, national and in Quebec, for the last decade we're going to be prepared to be more open on more questions, secondly, a simple question of influence. able Quebecers. In the Liberal party, which is the only other party they can really consider, the competition for influence is much greater."

If, and he acknowledges it is a big if, he can attract the right people, Clark believes he can build a new countervailing federalist force. "I think we're much better able to do that than the Liberal party is. Even fresh, able people who come into the Liberal party are going to be playing a second role to people whose reputations have become tarnished, fairly or not, during the last decade. Also, he says, the Quebec election was partly a rejection of policies the federal Liberals are associated with.

Clark helieves finister Trudeau has forfeited by his record the claim he had in 1968 to a special under-standing of Quebec and, through it, a capacity to hold the country together. His claim is even weaker viewed from a national perspective.

While the urgent item on the agenda now is making Quebec feel at home in Canada the broader question is making all Canadians feel at home in all Canadians feel at home in Canada. I think that while the prime minister's capacity to reconcile has been limited in He makes no claims to personal charisma. He thinks the country can, perhaps must, do without that brand of Quebec it's been virtually destroyed beyond redemption in the rest of Canada."

(Last weekend marked the be closer to a Pearson than to a first anniversary of Joe Clark's leadership of the Conservatives. This interview and assessment is by David Humphreys, managing editor of the Ottawa Journal, who is writing a book about Clark.)

A year ago Clark considered that the base mood of the country was cynicism—cynicism with all politicians and governments. "There is now a sense in the country that the stakes are higher. There is. a real concern about the capacity of the country to hold Concerns in the west are not but rather on the west's own feeling of alienation from Ot-

When there is a sharper sense of threat to the country people surrender some of their cynicism and they're prepared to work again with institutions. In a sense the election of a government dedicated to the partition of the country could be one of the very important inducements to the country to comé together. It could serve rather than separate. I think a lot of Canadians are now prepared to open questions they considered closed before. The best example is the prime minister. He was a rigid, rigid constitutionalist, a rigid centralist. Now he's prepared killed it. to consider a wider range of options. That attitude is evident on a lot of things that are far more important than con-

Clark has been true to his word during his first year at the party's helm.

'We Will Win This Country By Hard Work'

"Let us be honest," he told the convention in the Ottawa Civic Centre a year ago. "We will not take this country by storm, by stealth or by surprise. We will win it by hard work. And I and my colleagues in Parliament will be out there with you, riding by riding, day by day, working to win.

His emphasis on teamwork has left some residue of doubt about his ability to lead the country. But Clark has always been underestimated by those who don't know him, first as an Alberta paper, much later as a candidate proposing to knock off a sitting Liberal in Rocky Mountain, today as challenger for the highest post in govern-

Trudeau or a Diefenbaker

I emphasize the team for two reasons," he says. "I believe a country like Canada really is quite literally too big for any one person's perspec tive to be imposed on it. Some of our difficult days in government, including now, have been the consequence of trying to cram a broad country into the strong perspective of one

"One of the great disuniting factors in Canada is to have the Toronto idea of Canada, or the Montreal idea, or indeed the High River idea, imposed on places where it doesn't fit,"
He also believes the team approach allows other capable players a chance to perform. Of course if they fail, for example in the Commons when the leader is away, the captain takes the blame.

Clarks doctrine of diversity is deeply-rooted. When he was editor of The Gateway at the University of Alberta in 1959 an organization called the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society folded. It failed, Clark wrote, because it attempted to unify a diverse faculty. "It attempted to take the French student, and physicist, psy-chologist and English major and lump them into one round ball rolling towards a common pin. The pin was not there and it should never be there. Diversity is the strength of the faculty . . . the ASUS is dead. Long live the diversity which

Updating that idea in our conversation, Clark said that any definition of unity, any assumption that the only way we can unite the nation is to treat it all the same, is doomed to

"I think we've been having a little bit too much of that recently. An approach to government that recognizes the importance and the reality of diversity in this country will bring Canadians together."

He had been reading an introduction to a collection of estroduction to a collection of essays by Northrop Frye, the University of Toronto literary critic. "He made the point about the danger of confusing unity and identity — they're not at all the same. If we insist on unity in a country like Canada. unity in a country like Canada which is so diverse we destro identity ... I've argued for some time that our identity is a cumulative one. It's a national cumulation of strong local or regional identities Asked what kind of Canad he would like to see in 10 or 15 years, he replied in a similar vein. "I hope there would be a much more secure sense of local identity in the various regions of the country; that people would not apologize for coming from small towns, or from particular ethnic com-munities of large cities, or the other things that really help to define and give them some pride in identity. I think that would have an immense cultural importance. My view leadership. In style, he would there is some sense of self, people are better able to do other things they do — raise families, repair cars or whatever." He mentioned another theme which has begun to emerge in recent speeches, the land of adventure. "We are a young country," he says, "there is a tremendous amount to do here. If there has been a failure in policy, looking back on the past decade, it has been that we have given far more attention to security than we have to expansion. We've lost something with a sense of possibility that is a very real part of this country. You can't talk in terms of monuments or airports. It is a question of spirit."

Clark is fond of quoting the western author Wallace

Stegner who wrote in Wolf Willow that "history is a pontoon bridge. Every man walks and works at its building end." He says the phrase "the building end" describes the spirit we must restore in Canada. In a recent Toronto speech he referred to opportunities and adventure. "As a government we will have the obligation to again encourage Canadians to use their initiative and imagination, and sense of ven-ture. And when we Canadians become again a Country of Adventure — proud of our particular heritage, drawn by our common continent - the and diminish will be defeated.'

Clark has never had much use for the easy labels of the political spectrum. At the leadership convention he described himself as being at the centre of his party with the great majority of its members. He has also been described as a populist in the sense that he draws his strength from the grass roots. Peter Jenkins of The Manchester Guardian way that it befits Clark. "It is only helpful to use the word populist at all," Jenkins wrote, "if it conveys a distinc-tive political manner or style, rooted in the politics of country against city and of small against big, expressive of a frustration which transcends mere divisions of wealth and status, a combination of at-titudes which might seem incongruous to urban political sophisticates but which makes more sense to ordinary people the more it seems to cut across

There is no question that Clark was picked because he appealed to ordinary people across the country. Since then he has consistently drawn crowds to meetings in some of the larger cities several times larger than similar meetings in the past at comparable times and places!

George Cooper, Clark's chairman in Nova Scotia dur-ing the leadership campaign, made this comment after the recent provincial convention at which Clark spoke:
"Guys who often are a little cynical said after he spoke, 'He said just exactly what I think.' He has managed to tap the feelings of the ordinary guy — down here anyway — about the country.

Which may explain the paradox of Clark, with a record of leading the polls 10 times in succession while still the sub-ject of criticism in the press. The Tories have led the Gallup poll only 11 times since 1960, the last 10 under Clark.

Clark himself says the poll partly explains press criticism. "We're ahead and a lot of commentators cannot really understand that and some of them perhaps are not prepared to ackind of criticism would not be raised. Since we're ahead there

The most frequent criticism recently has been that Clark isn't saying anything, that he isn't producing any detailed policy. His chief of staff Bill Neville calls it the "received truth syndrome.

"A standard is being applied to us in opposition that is nor-mally applied only to governments," Clark responds. "We don't have the public serus with the detail of policy that a have the obligation to provide

Yet, true to the open and frank approach that won him the leadership, he also said he will not be producing detailed policy for some time. The cravat as we know it dates from the 17th Century during the reign of Louis XIV. King Louis employed a company of palace guards from Austria who wore neck pieces similar to the modern bow tie. The King was so impressed that he adopted the look and it quickly became the rage of Paris and the continent. It was originally called a Croat which eventually became corrupted to Cravat.

It took the infamous Beau Brummell, however, toclevate the tying of a tie from fashion to an art form. He would spend several hours a day getting his knot exactly right. The social position of gentlemen of that day was graded by their ability to knot a Cravat properly. Thankfully we have since relaxed our attitudes to style and appearance. If you are interested in

Vadnais Suspended

MONTREAL (CP) - Pres-MONTREAL (CP) — President Clarence Campbell has suspended defenceman Carol Vadnais of New York Rangers for five games following a stick-swinging incident in the Rangers-New York Islanders game Saturday, the National Hockey League office announced Wednesday night.

Campbell levied the suspension, which also cuts Vadnais' salary for the five games, after reviewing the case Wednesday afternoon.

In the incident last Saturday Vadnais apparently hit Garry Howatt of the Islanders with his stick following a fight between the two. Howatt was assessed a five-minute major while Vadnais received a major and a match

Vadnais must also pay the automatic $200 fine for a match penalty.
Vadnais will return to action when Montreal Canadiens play host to the Rangers on March 5th.

Juvenile Fingerprints Illegal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fingerprints of juveniles are inadmissable as evidence in juvenile court unless the fin-gerprints are taken with the

In a judgment dated Tuesday, Judge Murphy — sitting in the family division of the provincial court — found that a juvenile had been wrongfully fingerprinted by the Van-couver police department.

In a voire dire hearing in January concerning a delin-quency charge against a 13-year-old boy, the judge was told that the Vancouver police seph Christianson told the court the fingerprinting policy had been in effect snce Nov. 21, 1975, on the authority of the deputy chief constable, Tom Dixon.

The police policy directive was filed with the court, and Judge Murphy quoted from the document in her decision.

"Juveniles are to be treated in the same way as any other person with respect to indictable offences and are to be fingerphed, whether they are transferred (to higher court) or not," the policy directive that the juvenile was fingerprinted pursuant to the could have provided such pre-Identification of Criminals Act of Canada.

At the conclusion of the voir dire, defence counsel Tom Gove said a juvenile's fin-gerprints are not legally obtainable since offences under the juvenile delinquents act were summary, not indictment, proceedings.

Therefore, the Identification of Criminals Act did not apply, Gove argued, and there is no authority to fingerprint anyone outside of that act.

Crown counsel Elaine Ferbey submitted that there was no statutory authority to or not," the policy directive stated. no statutory authority to prevention had it wished to do so.

She also argued that the rules of evidence are the same for adult and juvenile trials and that the intention of the Juvenile Delinquents Act is to deal with the juvenile differently after apprehension

Supertanker Skippers Can Take Test Runs

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE Washington Post

NEW YORK—Tension filled the wheelhouse of the 250,000-ton Texaco super-tanker as it laboriously inched its way at three knots into the fog-shrouded harbor. At this speed, a full stop signal would mean that it would take the ship two miles feet would drive the ship-aground and spill thousands of gallons of crude oil.

Hands clasped behind his back, master Wallace McCol-lough paced the bridge, grumbling and wondering aloud why cold winter rain always seems to be falling at the deep water port of Milford Haven, Wales.

A foghorn sounded its dirge-like admonition, and a loud-speaker crackled with ship-toshore messages warning of the vagaries of the sea-curfuriously bobbing buoys blinked brightly through the port and starboard windows of the bridge.

Suddenly came a crisp order from the master: Stop all engines and bring the wheel amidships.

As the telegraph clanged the order to the engine room, fluorescent lights blinked to life above the bridge, the horizon abruptly vanished—and a facade of props and scaffolds appeared through the win-

The simulator, housed on two floors of a Flight safety hangar, includes a fully equipped ship's bridge from which officers can look out. which officers can look out upon a panoramic reproduc-tion of their berthing port, re-

The purpose of the equipment — apart from providing a potentially profitable sideline for Flight Safety — is to refine the skills of harbor pilots and ship masters and reduce the number of oil spills resulting from groundings and collisions in port.

The heart of the simulator is a minute, wide-angle tele-vision camera the size of a 25-cent piece.

It slowly "tracks" across the face of a 15-by-30 foot geographic model board of the barbor.

The board, with a 2,000-to-1 scale of the topographical features of the harbor — including lighthouses, piers, jetties, cliffs and islands—was hand-crafted from thousands of photographs and charts made

The report, prepared over 18 months at the request of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (Dem.-Mass.), said federally regulated airline companies could have operated with lower costs.

At a news conference Wednesday, President Carter indicated that his administra-tion plans to support broad reforms of federal airline regulation, as proposed recently by Kennedy and Sen. Howard W. Cannon (Dem.-Nev.).

the Year of the Snake slithers in these perequisites and in these perequisites and more can be yours, according to Chinese tradition and most of the Chinese cooks we know. (Chinese New Year was celebrated Friday.)

I was tutored in the fine points of the Chinese New Year by Virginia Lee, a colleague, good friend and one of the finest Chinese cooks in Manhattan. The tutoring occurred during a recent two-day session in my home as she picked over the large bean sprouts, made casserole dishes and cooked shrimp. dishes and cooked shrimp balls, pork balls and fish balls for a delectable Chinese fire pot to be offered guests at the end of a feast should they still feel pangs of hunger.

Bell's Palsy Can Be Cured

I, awoke one morning and was unable to move the left side of my face. This was three weeks ago, and it's still the same. My doctor calls it Bell's palsy. Can the face ever become completely cured? Is it known what causes this?—Mr. A. H. Dear Mr. H.:

I am certain that your doctor has assured you that most cases of Bell's palsy can be cured. It does take time, how-ever. In many instances, it takes six or eight weeks be-fore the muscles of the face hegin to function again.

Bell's palsy, named after Sir Charles Bell, the doctor who first recognized and described this condition, may occur as a result of a draft, an injury or a virus infection.

A large nerve, technically known as the "seventh" or "facial" nerve, has three important branches. The first goes to the forehead. The sec-ond runs to the upper eyelid and the third controls the muscles of the lower part of the face, and around the lips

With Bell's palsy, the elec-trical impulses that normally flow through this nerve are blocked. The result is that it may be difficult to move the lips easily, to close the eye, or to lift the forehead. There are now many special tion of the nerve that is af-

Employment Top Concern Of Women in Province of concern to women in Brit-ish Columbia?

That question was tossed at me over the telephone the other morning by a young woman who had been tabbed to chair a round-table discus sion in her particular club.

In order to give an intelligent answer I went back to a report compiled early last year by Lynne Pearson. Lynne, you will remember, was in charge of a yan pro-gram sponsored by the International Women's Year Secre-tariat, based in the federal government's Privy Council

She travelled with that van throughout B.C., visiting large and small communities. She talked to women in those communities and she heard of their hopes and fears, their dreams and their needs.

It is from those conversa-tions that she impointed four major concerns to women throughout the province, con-cerns I passed on to my tele-phone inquirer and that I thought some of my readers might also be interested in. First of the four comes under the heading of employunder the heading of employidentified as lack of job op-portunities, discrimination in hiring, non-equal pay for equal work, difficulties in ob-taining training, lack of sensitivity by counsellors and diffivity by counselors and difficulty in entering traditionally "male" fields of work.

Throughout B.C. and particularly in the northern areas, there appeared to be limited opportunities for employment. Most jobs were in clerical, secretarial, waitress, sales or cleaning fields.

It was discovered that sometimes the problem was caused by women themselves who tok a limited view of the kind of work they were willing to do. ing to do.
Sometimes the problem rested with counsellors whose attitudes caused them to-direct women into traditional It was also found the prob-lem could be the result of em-ployers not hiring women for certain jobs.

Often, however, it was re-lated to the economic situation of province and country. In other words, in an econom-

Let the Driver Keep on Truckin

DEAR ABBY: I've heard of wives who have threatened to leave their husbands unless they gave up their dangerous jobs as policemen. Well, I'm not about to leave my husband because of his danger-ous job, only he's not a cop, but a newspaper truck driver who drives 200 miles a night,

Body a Fine Chemist But Still Needs Help

The body is a marvelous chemist. It can manufacture thousands of different substances we need for growth and health. But it is not a perfect chemist. It must have certain substances from foods, between 40 and 45 of them regularly and in adequate amounts. These are the "essential" nutrients, the raw materials that can be broken down, rearranged, combined and utilized in the never end-ing internal process called metabolism.

Some give us the energy wee need to stay warm, to move about and to keep organs, like the heart and lungs, functioning 24-hours a day, year after year. Some help us to utilize foods and other nutrients. And some are necessary for the growth and repair of every cell and tissue repair of every cell and tissue in the body.

Nutrients are usually divided into five categories: carbo-hydrates, proteins, fats, vi-tamins and minerals. A sixth, both a nutrient and a food, is so basic that it is sometimes forgotten-water.

It is the carbohydrates, proteins and fats, alone among the essential nutrients; that provide us with fuel and energy. During the breakdown process in the cells, carbohydrates, fats and proteins are oxidized. That is, the carbon and hydrogen atoms in their and hydrogen atoms in their molecules combine with ox-ygen from the bloodstream to form carbon dioxide and water. In the process, energy is released, which we can measure as calories. One four calories; one gram of fat

Proteins, both animal and vegetable, are the building blocks for the body. They are essential to the creation of new bones and soft tissues during periods of growth—and to their repair and maintenance in adulthood. As building blocks they have no substitute. No other nutrient can take their place.

There's a lot more to like about Granada than just price. Low price is only part of value - and value is what today's car buyer demands more than ever. The new Granada Special Edition is available in 2 and 4-door models. Standard equipment on every Granada includes such value features as front disc brakes, steel-belted radial ply tires, cut pile carpeting and a new 4-speed manual overdrive transmission. The overdrive helps save on gas and the 4-speed stick makes the car fun to drive. And Granada has Ford of Canada's DuraGuard System, which includes a no-charge 36-month unlimited mileage warranty against rust perforation. The details are at your Ford Dealer. While you're there let him spell out the full Granada value story.

They were married in a civil ceremony which was at-tended by Mrs. Sharon Fleming and his brother, Bakhta-war (Bob) Dhillon.

The group went drinking afterwards at a lounge in Langford, then at the Halfway House beer parlor and then at the Army-Navy club, with

They went out drinking a taxi and said he went to the club, looking for her in the lounge area but not seeing her. He said the doorman let him check for her. (The doorman, Walter Ja-again.

The next morning, he said he went to "my place on Ca-mosun" and went to college, returning to Dowler Place about 1 or 2 p.m. Police told him about 5 or 6 p.m. his wife was found dead. Cross-examined by defence counsel Gordon MacDonald, he said he didn't sign the book at the Army-Navy club Sept. 7 but changed his testimony when the registration book showed a signature he identified as being his.

He said he hadn't moved from Camosun Street to Dowler and all his belongings were at Camosun.

Dhillon denied suggestions that his wife went to bed on one hour or 20 minutes later than him, sticking with his original five minutes. The following night, when she wasn't home, he said she had told him she would be going dancing and would be back by 11 p.m.

He was worried but denied being upset or bothered by her not being there. Then why, MacDonald asked, did he call a taxi and rush off to look for her. "Just to see her," he re-

"hunting" for his wife and de-nied a suggestion that if he found her he would take her home, saying "maybe we have a couple of drinks."

Presented with an affirmative answer he gave at the preliminary hearing that he wanted to "get her out of there and bring her home," he agreed Wednesday that was a true answer.

He said he didn't remember

MacDonald said, "you had no plans of moving to Montreal."

Dhillon replied: "No. I was going to complete the se-mester."

Dhillon said he loved his wife and her children and was "sad" after he walked back from the Halfway House that she wasn't home.

Next witness was Florence Aitken, the accused man's common-law wife. She said he drove her to work at Princess Mary res-taurant at 5 p.m. Sept. 8 and picked her up between 10:15 and 10:20 p.m.

They and then went to the restau-nd he rant about 6 p.m. and asked "if I'd heard about the girl."
She said he told her "I gave her a ride last night and I'm a suspect," that he had taken her to her apartment, waited while she changed, then drove her downtown, dropping her off at the Army-Navy club. "He kept saying 'I didn't do

He also told her the blood spatters could have come from looking over a person lying outside the Halfway House and that while he hit the hitchhiker he didn't hurt him "that bad."

She said Aitken was distraught; shaking, perspiring and upset after a Sept. 3 incident at the Halfway House in which he suffered a lacerated tendon to his right ladex finger while breaking up a fight up a fight.

But she noffced "nothing unusual" the night of Sept. 8.

She said Aitken had always maintained his story of driv-ing Mrs. Dhillon from the ment, then dropping her off at the Army-Navy club and going to the Princess Mary restaurant to pick her up. She said he originally had a

Regardless of our personal opinions about broad beans as a table delicacy, the plant itself is rather unusual in the realm of garden vegetables.

Several readers have expressed surprise at a recent column advising immediate sowing in a well drained shel-tered place for pickings in late spring and early sum-mer. Some were not aware that broad beans were edi-

Although we call this plant a "bean", it is not a true bean, nor is it a member of the bean family, Phaseolus (fas-e-o-lus). Strange as it may seem, the Strange as it may seem, the plant is a vetch, one of the few species which have no climbing tendrils. Botanically it is Vicia faba. Vicia (visea) comes from the Latin "vincio" meaning "to bind", referring to the clinging habit of most vetches, and "faba" (or fava) was a one-time generic fava) was a one-time generic

Alberta Group Seeks Rewritten Constitution

CALGARY (CP) — A committee of the Independent Alberta Association (IAA) has recommended formation of a Western National Party to seek a new Canadian constitution or, failing that, independence for Western Canada, The Albertan says.

A copy of the proposed party platform, obtained by the newspaper, said the goal of the party is "that no government shall be permitted to government shall be permitted to government shall be permitted to govern. Western, Consider govern Western Canada unless its powers are limited by a written constitution approved by 75 per cent of Western Canadians."

The proposal now must be approved by a general meeting of association members here Monday.

The Independent Alberta Association was formed three years ago as a research group to determine the cost of Al-berta's membership in Confederation.

A committee spokesman said, "The West is constitutionally disenfranchised. We are advocating a new division of powers, a new electoral system and written constitu-tional protection of individual rights and freedoms."

The spokesman said the committee wants the party organized in time to contest every seat at the next provincial electric states. cial election.

'Alberta could be self-suf-"Alberta could be self-suf-ficient in this thing but we would prefer to see involve-ment in British Columbia, the Yukon, the McKenzie District of the Northwest Territories, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and parts of Northern Ontario," the spokesman said the spokesman said.

She's a 'Mad Dog' in a Cruiser

WASHINGTON WASHINGTON — Some people are fooled by her appearance — her blue eye shadow, her pierced ears — shadow, her pierced ears—but her male co-workers call her Mad Dog.

That's after she pins up her waist-length brown hair, plants a district police officer's cap on top of it and straps on her .38 calibre revolver.

Officer Maralyn Hershey, 28, has never spent much time contemplating changes in modern sex roles while prowling dark alleys and back streets, confronting suspected thieves, addicts, pimps, hookers, drunk-and-disorderlies, and other denizens of the midnight hours in Washington's high-crime 14th Street NW territory.

None of this has changed, apparently, since Hershey got a partner named Dorothy.

Without fanfare, the D.C. police department recently made Hershey and rookie officer Dorothy Cobey the first all-female scout car team on the streets of Washington and, as far as they know, any city in the country.

in the country.

This was the latest in a series of steps through which the department has, since the early '70s, increasingly blurred the lines between male and female police duties and become a model for other cities where resistance to the idea of uniformed females rehere, including 18 investiga-tors, six sergeants and one lieutenant; 244 women (or 79

"I guess some women would view this as the ultimate for women's lib," Hershey said the other night as Scout Car 101 drifted through the ice-encrusted streets, "but really, we're just two rolice of

It was 3 a.m. The officers could figure that the night and the sub-freezing wind had effectively driven most innocents from the streets. Along certain blocks of 14th Street, the men and women who huddled in clusters on corners, their breath blossoming white, or sat in parked Cadillacs with the engines purring were not, as the police put it in their street slang parody, "waitin' for no bus."

This night, likt other nights, Scout 101's route took it between this bleak region and the stylish hotels and shops of Connecticut Avenue a few blocks to the west, with side trips orchestrated by commands that came in short bursts from the police radio.

Tight Money Grip Squeezing The Glamor Out of Trucking

By BILL RICHARDS

Washington Post
LOS ANGELES — It is 11
p.m. under the 75-foot-Standard sign and the entire 40-acre parking lot around Alphy's Truck Stop here is rumbling in the darkness from the sound of hundreds of idling diesel engines.

"Look at that," says Bob Cota as a driving school's red, white and blue semi-trailer moves haltingly through the lot, a nervous learner at the wheel and a big sign on the back that says "Earn Big Pay — Drive Big Rigs."

with their fuel price protest three years ago last week, Cota and his independent trucking buddies have become legends, they are seen as hard-driving, hard-living road cowboys whose freedom knows no bounds and whose lives are an unending series of glamor-

93rd YEAR, No. 216

W. G. Parrett, the Prince George lawyer who carried out the searches, testified that only four small lots adjacent to the proposed development are privately held.

Parrett said he turned up only four small properties belonging to Phillips, all in Dawson Creek or Chetwynd, well away from the pipeline

Art Cameron, Phillips' constituency secretary in Dawson Creek, and two B.C. Petroleum Corp. employees, resigned

Stephen Rogers (SC-Vancouver South) said Monday that Weeks offered friends stock and land investment trips about the development before its official announcement. Rogers said he under-stood that Weeks told a friend that Phillips had property for sale in the development area.

Two witness called Wednesday by inquiry counsel Ernest Alexander testified there was almost no land available in the development region after April, 1976. No decision was taken on a pipe-line development until Nov.

Alexander said he will call Phillips and Cameron to testify about their property holdings when the inquiry resumes March 21. Mr. Justice Kirke Smith adjourned the hearing Wednesday to await empletion of an investigation Parrett said his search of titles in the Prince George land office turned up four properties owned by Phillips, all purchased before the last election. Three Dawson Creek properties were acquired in 1959, 1966 and 1968.

Phillips' wife Ruth is listed as co-owner of two of the Dawson Creek properties and J. N. McPhail is listed as coowner of the third. Phillips a fourth property in Chetwynd Nov. 25, 1975.
